DearEhud and Yakov

This evening we analised the situatioan, and came to the following conclusion:

The prime minister and Mr. Szijjarto are mistaken in assuming, that the Russian governement does not support Renova on the kazakh issue. If it can be demonstrated to them, that the Russian governement does care, the case can be reversed. If the Hungarian governement has to choose between good relations with Russia and Kazakhastan, they will choose Russia.

Yours, Peter

The prime minister said, that he has discussed this issue with Mr. Szijjarto, and they decided that the chances of collecting any money are very small, and such a move would antagonize the Kazakh governement.

The prime minister said, that he is sure that their decision will not affect the Hungarian-Russian state relations.

The prime minister said, that since there is no other issue that has reached a stage, where his decision is needed, he did not think that such a meeting would be necessary.

Mr. Töröcskei said, that he thinks that for a person of the status of the beneficiary of Renova, a co-operation with any country starts with a personal meeting with the head of state, where they discuss the basic principles of such a co-operation. After such a meeting all possibilities can be examined at lower levels, and highest level meetings can follow when necessary, but the first introductory meeting is essential. The prime minister said, he will discuss this with Mr. Szijjarto, and make a decision afterwards.

We have not answered the office of Mr. Szijjarto as to the proposed date of the 29th September for a meeting between him and Mr. Barak. Please let us know when there is a decision as to this meeting, so that we can inform the office of Mr. Szijjarto.

Yours, Peter
